Experience

Designer at Maga Design, August 2014 - Present

At Maga, I work with a tight knit group of designers in a high collaboration environment. Our main output is printed posters that seek to organize and consult businesses to become more streamlined as well as serving as a visual motivator for employees. On top of that, we branch into the interactive world, creating web apps and working with touch devices. I was very client facing, working directly with clients in their space more often than not.

Freelance Designer, May 2013 - Present

Worked with folk trio Vulcans, the Philadelphia Songwriters Project, and Bûlée Bakery creating a variety of print projects including: album art, stickers, posters, banners, brochures, and food packaging. Also worked on contract with Roda Marketing since May 2014. With them, I created infographics, posters, website banners, and other web content.

Design Intern at Inovat, May 2013 - September 2013

Hired to assist the design team with various tasks including website mockups, email banners, assisting in site markup, and smaller print projects. I was also exposed to a unique array of tools and techniques to connect with clients and other members of the team.

Design Lab Technician at Millersville University, August 2012 - May 2013

In this position, I was responsible for printing, troubleshooting, and helping design students with their files. I learned a great deal about printing standards and how to effectively produce a final piece in the printer's eyes. This included how to troubleshoot common problems with various types of paper and ink types. Also assisted in rallying students to common causes for the major at large.

Student Manager of Millersville-Design.com, April 2012 - May 2013

Alongside my professor, I managed the major's main outlet in the form of a Wordpress blog for announcements and information. Students could go to the website and find out if there were any events coming up or any recently awarded students. After my time in this position, I shared my knowledge with a younger student who took over the duties after I graduated.
